Manager's Commentary

Macro Commentary

China opened the month with its strongest manufacturing Purchasing Managers Index (PMI) reading since 2011 (August reading). This marked the fourth straight month in a row of manufacturing growth accompanied by the first month to report a rise in exports in 2020. Meanwhile, European markets were buoyed, at the start of September, by the announcement of a new Euro100bn stimulus package to combat the covid pandemic.

However, this positive news was to be outweighed by painful moves lower on the other side of the Atlantic. Despite non-farm payrolls showing positive gains of almost 1.4m jobs in August (broadly in line with consensus), this was not enough to offset the tech-led declines in US markets.

Back home in the UK, factory output rose at its fastest pace in 6 years, despite factories cutting jobs for the seventh month in a row. The Services PMI also surprised on the upside rising to 58.5 in August from 56.5 in July as consumers and businesses returned to spending on the back of easing lockdown restrictions. Indeed, retail sales grew for a fourth month in a row in August. Separately, house prices reached a new all time high (Nationwide, August) thanks to pent up demand as a result of covid restrictions easing. Unfortunately, however, UK construction growth went in to reverse in August as the sector continued to cut jobs (ONS: Unemployment rose to 4.1% in July from 3.9% in June). Fears of a further spike in unemployment, as the furlough scheme moves closer to its end game, were partly offset by an announcement of a part-extension of the job protection scheme with both the government and businesses set to share responsibility for the costs. Meanwhile, inflation hit a low of 0.2% in August from 1% in July, albeit slightly beating expectations of 0% following the impact of the eat out to help out scheme.

Outside of these general macro soundings, Brexit once again raised its head as it was announced that the UK was drawing up plans to override part of last year's EU withdrawal agreement with the outturn being that the UK would trade on WTO terms from January; a claim that the Prime minister suggested would be "a good outcome". Fear of a no-deal Brexit saw the pound back under pressure once again. However, tensions were soon to ease a little, as it was suggested that the two parties may be edging back towards an agreement.

Without doubt, the main news of the month was focused around the new global spike in covid cases and a second wave of shut downs; albeit to a lesser degree than wave 1 shutdowns, and on a more targeted and localised level.

Central bank and government support, alike, have been key factors of market support throughout the pandemic, and whilst the Fed, the Bank of England and the European Central Bank (ECB) all left interest rates on hold during the month, the clear message from the former was that rates could stay at historically low levels for a long time to come. Meanwhile, September was to exit on a more positive note as hopes a second coronavirus stimulus package from the US congress seemed to be back on the table.

Market Commentary

Over the month, Global equity markets pulled back by 3.4% as represented by the MSCI ACWI index on a local currency price return basis, with the US again leading the losses followed by Europe, the UK and Emerging Markets. Japan actually posted modest positive returns. Fixed income was broadly stable with Global Treasuries broadly flat. Investment grade credit was also broadly stable, whilst high yield gave up some modest ground. In commodity markets, the BBG Commodity index pulled back 3.4% as oil retrenched and precious metal gave up some its prior gains.

During the month, the best performing IA (Investment Association) sectors excluding money markets were Japanese Equities, UK Index Linked Gilts and UK Gilts. By way of contrast, the worst performing IA sectors were UK equity and bond income, UK All Companies and UK Smaller Companies.
